

In the St. Louis Association Foot Ball League the O'Learys and Harry L. Yawitz team renewed their battle of the previous season and when the question was at last decided it was plain to all that the O'Learys were the better team of the two. At no time did the Tailors have a look in for the flag. The Hibernians and a team from St. Teresa's Junior Sodality completed this circuit.

During the month of August the game met with two sad blows. These were the deaths of Joseph Mason and Francis Murphy, two of the most gentlemanly players the game ever knew. Mason was for years a member of the champion St. Leos and it was only the past season he passed from the Klosterman fold. He was sold by the clever manager to the Irish-Americans at a price said to be a record for St. Louis soccer players. He was stricken with heart trouble while enjoying his vacation.

Young Murphy died in August. He was one of the stars of the Rock Church team, runners-up for the Amateur title. Previous to that he helped the famous young St. Teresa's earn their wonderful name. He was a fine forward and a good attack, passer and dribbler. He was a gentlemanly player and a lovable chap, and was a boy that one would like to meet.
