

Hibernian Association Foot Ball Club, Jersey City, N. J.

THOMAS J. JORDAN
President Hibernian Association
Foot Ball Club, Jersey City, N. J.

The Hibernians, one of the newest additions to the amateur foot ball world, bids fair to make a name for themselves in American soccer circles. Formed during the summer of 1912, the Hibs have got a team together which they hope will bring some of the honors of the soccer foot ball world to Jersey City. Thomas J. Jordan, the popular president of the club and one of Jersey City's popular citizens, is at the head of the organization, and, commanding as he does the esteem of his brother officials and all the players, he may be termed the right man in the right place. William P. Kennedy, the vice-president, may be relied upon, to capably assume the duties of president when occasion requires it. Sydney H. Shepherd, who last season was associated with the Washington Foot Ball Club, is the treasurer of the new club. Terence J. McKenna, former manager of the Washingtons, who won the honors in the second division of the Metropolitan and District Amateur League last season, is confident that he will pilot the Hibernians successfully through the first division of the same league, and is even hopeful that at the end of this season the Hibs will be found at the top of the first division.

Amongst the new players secured for the Hibernians are T. Keith, T. Lamberton, T. McKenna, J. McCallum, S. Shepherd, J. Glendinning, all of the Washington F.C.; P. McKenna (Brooklyn Celtics), A. McGowan (Columbia Oval), Wm. Sandison and J. Preston (Bayonne Thistles), and E. Shields and J. Coupland, of Glasgow, Scotland. Manager McKenna expects to add a few others before the season is very old. The club is fortunate in securing excellent grounds, conveniently located at Montgomery and Merseles Streets, Jersey City.
