

inaugurated by the Michigan State League proved to be a great success in every sense of the word. They attracted lots of outsiders to the game, and the income derived from them put the league on a firm financial footing. During last season soccer got extremely popular in Detroit and, next to base ball, is more talked of than any other outdoor sport. Mr. Bater, Mr. Healey, and Mr. Daines deserve great credit, as it was mainly through their efforts that the Michigan State League has grown and prospered.
