

Seven teams were formed, and although the attendance at the games was poor at the start, by the end of the season when the boys were returning from Europe and the training camps, the crowds were fast getting back to normal.

The State association took complete charge of the games, provided fields and referees and allowed all the clubs in the league a percentage of the gate receipts. A popular feature was a double-header each week.

The plan was a good one, both as to finance and management, and well worth trying out again, as in a normal season it should work to the excellent advantage of all concerned.

George Healey, the popular president of the Michigan Soccer Association (and, incidentally, the new president of the U.S.F.A.), sponsored the new plan and is to be congratulated on its success considering the great difficulties which had to be overcome during the unsettled war period.

Roses F.C. topped the league, losing but one game and tying one to five victories. Detroit's were a close second with two defeats to five in the win column.

The teams finished as follows:

Club.	Won.	Drawn.	Lost.	Goals		Points.
				For.	Against.
Roses	5	1	1	16	4	11
Detroit	5	0	2	13	8	10
